ABOUT SUE JACQUES

Sue Jacques is a keynote speaker and consultant who specializes in professionalism, corporate civility, and executive social graces.

If you've ever wondered what to do, what to say, or what to wear, Sue can help.

With over sixteen years as a keynote speaker, corporate facilitator, and professionalism consultant, Sue will help you and your business team gain personal confidence, develop client relationships, and earn corporate respect.

Sue has appeared on Oprah Radio, Business News Network, CTV, CBC, Global TV, and the Oprah Winfrey Network. Her professional journey was featured in More magazine. She is a columnist for Physicians Practice, a contributor to The Huffington Post, and the author of What The Fork? An Unpretentious Guide to Formal Dining for Informal People.

Before becoming a full-time speaker and professionalism consultant, Sue worked for more than 18 years as a forensic death investigator at the medical examiners office. During that time she was involved in the medical investigation of thousands of unexpected and violent deaths, and learned about the value of respect and the ultimate costs of incivility.

Sue's mission is to reverse rudeness, revive respect, and create courteous cultures—in businesses, homes, and communities around the world. A former globetrotter and 3-time marathon runner, Sue also enjoys modeling, music, Muay Thai, and Maui.

Whether she's working with an individual, a team, or a company, Sue has a knack for inspiring confidence, professionalism, and grace. Her personal motto is simple,

“When in doubt, choose kindness.”
